

Contents

Introduction Andie Silva and Scott Schofield . . . . .	1
Teaching Digital Shakespeare Laura Estill . . . . .	17
Interfaces and Ephemerality: Teaching Early Modern Ballads Mary Learner . . . . .	35
Constructing and Contesting the Past: Teaching History in the Age of Wikipedia Jessica Marie Otis . . . . .	71
Annotated Shakespeare: Building Digital Archives in the Undergraduate Classroom Scott Schofield . . . . .	103
“Reading as Design”: Teaching Early Modern Texts through a Multimodal Lens Denna Iammarino . . . . .	115
Building Scaffolding: Present Progressive Pedagogy in The Pulter Project: Poet in the Making Leah Knight . . . . .	137
Digital Competencies, Collaborations, and Cultures of Work: A Case Study from the Making and Knowing Project Tianna Helena Uchacz, Naomi Rosenkranz, and Terry Catapano . . . . .	157
Collaborative Bibliodigigogy: Teaching Bibliography with Digital Methodologies and Pedagogical Partnerships Kristen Abbott Bennett and Janelle Jenstad . . . . .	219

Undergraduate Curricular Contexts for Research in Textual Studies Brent Nelson and Peter Robinson . . . . .	273
Implementing the Do-It-Yourself First Folio: From Concept Model to Pedagogical Tool Meaghan Brown, Rebecca Niles, and Stacey Redick . . . . .	295
Pedagogy in Performance: Discovering Shakespeare through the MIT Merchant Module Mary Erica Zimmer . . . . .	313
Contributors . . . . .	349