

Contents

Preface	vii
Being Reborn: The Humanities, Computing and Styles of Scientific Reasoning Willard McCarty	1
A Pragmatics of Re-Conception? (A Response to Willard McCarty, “Being Reborn: The Humanities, Computing and Styles of Scientific Reasoning”) Raymond G. Siemens	23
Digital Still Images and Renaissance Studies (with a Short Section on Digital Video) Michael Greenhalgh	27
Renaissance Studies and New Technologies: A Collection of “Electronic Texts” David L. Gants and R. Carter Hailey	73
Electronic Sound Susan Forscher Weiss and Ichiro Fujinaga	93
Iter: Building an Effective Knowledge Base William R. Bowen	101
ACLS Humanities E-Book Project Eileen Gardiner and Ronald G. Musto	110
EMLS: A Case Study in the Development of an Academic Ejournal Lisa Hopkins, Raymond G. Siemens, and Matthew Steggle	144
Creating a Website for Writing on Hands: Memory and Knowledge in Early Modern Europe Peter M. Lukehart	161

Reading and Teaching Shakespeare in the Virtual Library	177
Rebecca Bushnell
Performers on the Road: Tracking Their Tours with the	191
REED Patrons and Performances Website
Sally-Beth MacLean and Alan Somerset
The Perdita Project: Women's Writing, Manuscript	230
Studies and XML Tagging
Jonathan Gibson
Encoding Renaissance Electronic Texts	243
Ian Lancashire
The Devil is in the Details: An Electronic Edition of the	261
Devonshire MS (British Library Additional MS 17,492), its
Encoding and Prototyping
Raymond G. Siemens, Karin Armstrong, and Barbara Bond
Coincidental Technologies: Moving Parts in Early Modern	300
Books and in Early Hypertext
Richard Cunningham
The Exploration and Development of Tools for Active	321
Reading and Electronic Texts
Stephanie F. Thomas	